

Bedtime Story For The Little Ones

UNCLE WIGGLY AND HIPPO HOPPY.

By HOWARD B. GARDNER.

UNCLE WIGGLY, will you come over to our pond this afternoon?" asked Lila Wigglesworth, the duck girl, as she made some funny looking marks with her webbed feet in the dust in front of the hollow stump bungalow of Mr. Longears, the rabbit gentleman.

"What for?" asked the bunny. "Do you think I need a swim?"

"Oh, no," quacked Lila with a laugh of her yellow bill. "But my sister Alice and my brother Jimmie are going to show our new baby sister, Duckie Daddles, how to paddle in the water."

"Hurry! Duckie Daddles ever swim yet?" asked the bunny.

"No," answered Lila. "Duckie Daddles was only hatched out of the shell last week, and today she is going in the water for the first time. Mother thought you might like to come and see her. It's a sort of christening, you know."

"I'll be there," promised Uncle Wiggly. So he got his monkey hat, his housekeeper, Nurse Jane Fussy Wagon, to make his necktie nice and smooth, and then, twinkling his pink nose and putting his tall silk hat on a bit sideways, sporty-like, Uncle Wiggly started over to the duck pond.

He had not gone very far across the field between his hollow stump bungalow and the pond where the Wigglesworth family of ducks lived when he heard a voice saying:

"Oh dear! what a mess! what a mess! I am in this world! All I can do is to hop around and call 'Jer-ung! Jer-ung! Jer-ung!' as the men go down. Oh, dear! What a useless life I lead!"

"That's some one is," exclaimed Uncle Wiggly. "I must see who it is."

Looking down in the grass he saw a green frog.

"What is the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggly.

"I am unhappy because I can do no good in this world," said the frog. "I cannot even sell war stamps, as I am nearly always wet from so much swimming in the water, and I would get them all."

"No, you couldn't exactly sell war stamps," spoke Uncle Wiggly, "but there are other things you can do."

"What?" asked Hippo Hoppy, which was the name of the little green frog.

"Come with me and perhaps we shall find out," spoke the bunny. So Hippo Hoppy went on with Uncle Wiggly over to Mrs. Wigglesworth's pen.

"I have brought company with me to see Duckie Daddles take her first swim," said the bunny rabbit gentleman as he introduced Hippo Hoppy to the others.

"Pleased to meet you," said Mr. Wigglesworth, shaking paws with the frog. "You are just in time. Bring out Duckie Daddles, my dear."

"And show Uncle Wiggly and his friend how well our new baby can swim."

But Duckie Daddles could waddle out herself, being a week out of the shell, and when the bunny said "Quick! Quick!" it was just the same as if Mrs. Wigglesworth had said "Walk! Walk!"

So Duckie Daddles waddled with ROCK POINT.

LITTLE white wooden houses in a broken row, like an old man's teeth; behind them a fat green Maryland farm country of broad leaved tobacco fields and yellow wheat and deeply shadowed woods; before them a river seven miles wide of almost tropical green and blue, with a wooded island in the foreground shading the water with great sycamores and crowned by a pine grove, where nest the cypresses that hover all day long over the water plunging like living javalins, now and then, to snatch fish of dazzling silver from a river of polished jade.

So, impressively, in Rock Point, Maryland, where all summer long many Washingtonians go to catch fish. The place is not at all fashionable, there is no hotel worthy of the name, and the prices of everything are altogether too low to attract the "best people." Even the fact that at least one cabinet officer, a senator or two, and several congressmen go regularly to Rock Point does not seem to add to its dignity, or to endow it with the rank of a real summer resort. Somehow even a senator loses his value as a social ornament when he puts on a pair of overalls, and yells and gets excited over a trout.

The great majority of those who go to Rock Point are simply anglers—what ever else they may be at home, here they are but members of the great fraternity of fishermen. Bankers and plumbers often "chip in" on the same motor boat and borrow a canoe from each other. Women are fewer than men, but never lacking, and they are always hearty, unassuming women of the kind that get their hair wet when they go in swimming and don't pretend to be afraid of a fish.

Your Money and My Business

Whenever you find it necessary to spend a considerable sum for a needed outlay, you give careful consideration to the expenditure. You want to get the most you can for your money. Right here is where my proposition appeals to the thinking person.

I offer dentistry of the highest class, figured on the basis of any other commodity, that is to say: so much cost, with a reasonable (not an unjust) profit added. I have no fancy frills, no expensive membership in dental societies, no professional bunk, no hazy ideals of social distinction to maintain—but treat my work as a business proposition. Take it from me, my business is based on experience and common sense. The work done in my offices stays put. Your money goes farthest. I'm satisfied with the profit on a dozen cases the average dentist must have on one. A large volume of business enables me to treat a large number of patients at a small profit on each. And mark this: quality dentistry, not cheap dentistry. If I were endeavoring to sell cheap dentistry at a cheap price, I would be offering nothing new nor different from the ordinary dental advertiser, but in selling high quality dentistry, without pain, at painless prices, by skillful, experienced specialists, I am able to cut a big slice off the average dental fee, in most instances do better work, and still have a large surplus for you to tuck into your jeans, and give you a sensible, businesslike protective guarantee.

Dentistry is a business. See that you get a business deal. Do not let the "cheapest education" abuse your confidence. It will pay out-of-town patients to consult me.

THE YOGI BREATHING METHODS.

THE Yogi philosophy is always interesting, and the Yogi system of breathing is the best there is. Many women think anything connected with the Hindu Yogi must partake of mystery—that is, women who have read but little about these wise doctors.

Their science of breathing is simplicity itself, and the complete breath is the ideal way to breathe. It helps into play the entire respiratory apparatus, every part of the lungs, every air cell. It calls into play every one of the respiratory muscles, where ordinary breathing uses but a few.

It develops and enlarges the lungs, it vitalizes the entire system, it makes you feel like another person. Incidentally, it is the breathing method of healthy infants.

Well, for the complete breath, stand or sit erect, in a room full of fresh air or in the open. Inhale steadily through the nostrils, filling first the lower part of the lungs, then the middle part, then the upper chest, and so on, until the chest is full. In separate movements to this, but you should breathe steadily, making one movement, not a series of jerks.

Filling the lower part of the lungs presses down the diaphragm, which in turn exerts its pressure on the abdominal organs. Filling the middle part of the lungs pushes out the lower ribs, filling the upper part lifts the chest and the six or seven pairs of upper ribs.

Now, by practicing this breath for a few minutes every day, you will in time begin to breathe so naturally, and the benefit to your health and your beauty will be very great. And by the way, once in awhile it is well to elevate the shoulders slightly at the end of the complete intake of breath, to let the air pass freely into the small upper lobe of the right lung, which is frequently a breeding place for tuberculosis.

Questions and Answers.

A Reader: "The only way to remove superfluous hair permanently, is with the electric needle. It is not painful, sometimes a bit prickly, that's all. Charges run about $2 to $5 an hour and as many as 20 hairs can be removed at one sitting."

S. F. Y.: "Don't do anything now to remove the bust, you are only half developed and it is not unusual that you should be too large here. In a few years the bust will be in proportion to the rest of the figure."

He suddenly said: "Oh, never mind the change, give me my $100 bill back," and tendered the second $20 bill and the first $20 bill in his pocket.

The girl smiled and the man was gone. When he cash was counted at night he found a small percentage of which came back and have to be removed again.

WHERE MY MEMORY LEFT ME

ONE morning in November I was busy composing a Moonlight Sonata by Mozart in two flats, when I was rudely interrupted by an old woman knocking upon my door.

"Don't come in!" I called out, whereupon she walked in.

"Didn't you hear my 'don't'?" I asked angrily.

"I don't know," she answered, timidly. "Anyhow, I'm your aunt."

"Gwan," I answered, "I never had an aunt."

"Yes, you have—now!" said she.

"Excuse me," said I, as I looked at her shabby, ragged apparel. And I left the room.

"I'm worth money," she called out after me.

I came back.

"I shall leave it all to you," she said, magnanimously.

"Aunt!" I cried, and fell upon her neck.

Leaving me to ponder over my rare good fortune in coming into money, she left the room, saying as she went: "For the rest of this story, kindly look at the title."

Our government wants you to store coal early—do it now.
